

Victor MATHIEU

SENIOR STRATEGIST – BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT & CULTURE TRANSFORMATION

Victor's work with The Pacific Institute in the Americas, the Caribbean, and the United States has been a remarkable story of unlocking the potential of individuals, organizations – even nations – by the power of effective thinking. A native of Guatemala, he has turned his ability to create energizing visions to change the future of an emerging Latin America.

A large portion of Victor's work has occurred in Guatemala since the signing of the Peace Accords in 1995. Dedicating his time and talents, he has worked with a variety of business and governmental organizations. The Ministry of Education's (MINEDUC) initiative to train 12,000 teachers, who touch over a quarter of a million first and second grade students, benefited from Victor's commitment. One of his personal achievements has been his work with the Guatemalan national soccer team, as they transform their culture to become a respected member of the international soccer community.

"You change the way you think, you really do change the way you run your life and design your future," says Victor. "If I can help people make this change, then the future is one of hope, respect and dignity for everyone."

Educated in Guatemala and the United States, with a bachelor degree in business administration, Victor now makes his home in Seattle, Washington with Bonnie, his wife, and their four children.
